New York City Center is a city-owned facility and is supported by funds from the New York City Department of Cultural Affairs in partnership with the New York City Council.

Encores!, Encores! Off-Center, and Dance at New York City Center are made possible by the New York State Council on the Arts with the support of Governor Kathy Hochul and the New York State Legislature.

Council on the Arts

New York City Center
thanks Majority Leader
Schumer, Senator Gillibrand, Representative Maloney, and Representative Velázquez for tirelessly championing the Shuttered Venue Operators Grant which provided a lifeline to cultural organizations like New York City Center in the wake of the pandemic.

Their advocacy was crucial to the reopening of our theater.
Please join us in thanking them
for their vital support of the arts!

FALL FOR DANCE BOLDLY RETAKES CENTER STAGE

BY SUSAN YUNG

As summer fades into memory, the pleasures of autumn come into focus. And on the cultural calendar, New York City Center's Fall for Dance Festival is one of the most eagerly anticipated celebrations in the season that symbolically marks rebirth in the city. The Festival returns live starting October 13, in full force, with five wide-ranging slates featuring dance's brightest performers and choreographers, including four commissioned premieres, with all tickets at $15.

all over again.*

City Center has always prized artists first and foremost, and its four 2021 Fall for Dance commissions reflect deep and valued relationships with some of the field's most vibrant talents. Tap luminary Ayodele Casel performs a work sure to get the house buzzing. Modern dance icon Lar Lubovitch collaborates with New York City Ballet principals Adrian Danchig-Waring and Joseph Gordon on a special duet.

In a co-commission with the Vail Dance Festival under the guidance of ex-New York City Ballet luminary Damian Woetzel, the prodigious and talented young choreographer Justin Peck sets a dance on two of the city's most cherished and charismatic dancers—Tyler Peck of NYCB and Herman Cornejo, a star with American Ballet Theatre. And City Center's Broadway history gets a nod with The Verdon Fosse Legacy's Sweet Gwen Suite, a series of dances based on trios originally created for Gwen Verdon, featuring Georgina Pazcoguin of NYCB, also a recent Broadway star.

Two very different companies join the Verdon/Fosse suite on Program 1 (October 13 and 14). STREB EXTREME ACTION performs Molinettes, Add, and Air, choreographed by Elizabeth Streb, whose daredevil risk-taking and tests of her dancers' physical limits are legendary. In contrast is Kyle Abraham's company, A.I.M. His style is wide-ranging and unique, often incorporating gestures, hip-hop, and ballet in a silky and emotive mix.

On October 15 and 16, Program 2 features the boldly athletic choreography of Stephen Petronio, whose sleek dancers whip their bodies with precision and adrenaline; they dance in American Landscapes. Houston Ballet dances artistic director Stanton Welch's elegant Sons de L'Âme, an ode to the purity and elegance of the lines grounding classical ballet, and a showcase for two ravishing principal dancers. It is rounded out by ODEON: Redux by Ephrat Asherie Dance; Asherie has delighted audiences with her blend of underground, hip-hop, vogue, club, and more into a completely distinctive style.

Philadelphia Ballet is the new name of Pennsylvania Ballet, under the direction of ballet superstar Angel Corella. Leading off Program 3 (October 19 and 20), it presents Connection by Juliano Nunes, a young Brazilian choreographer who danced previously with Royal Ballet of Flanders. Another young talent, Micaela Taylor and The TL Collective, follows with the New York premiere of Drift. This LA-based choreographer has gained recognition quickly for her contemporary/pop dances which draw from her hip-hop and Gaga experience. And in what promises to be bring down the house, Step Africa! presents The Movement by Conrad Kelly II. This electrifying collective's body of work is built upon stepping, popular nationally at Black campuses; traditional African dance; and contemporary strands combined to connect audiences with the dynamic performers.

The fourth program (October 21 and 22) begins with a Vail Dance Festival co-presentation, 38109 by Lil Buck, who has astounded audiences with his boneless maneuvers and toe glides in which he appears to skate effortlessly. It is followed by Each in His Own Time, a City Center commission in part inspired by the alchemy resulting from Adrian Danchig-Waring and Joseph Gordon's previous performance during the 2020 Fall for Dance Festival of Lubovitch's tender duet from Concerto Six Twenty-Two. This world premiere adds to Lubovitch's canon of lushly swirling, organic contemporary dances laced with balletic lines, and which are always emotionally evocative. BalletX then performs Mapping Out A Sky by one of its co-founders, Matthew Neenan, who creates work combining ballet's virtuosity with a modern flair and visual and narrative wit.

And finally, on October 23 and 24, Program 5 begins with Fandango by Alexei Ratmansky, one of the world's pre-eminent ballet creators. This solo, danced by NYCB's Roman Mejia, is packed with technical fireworks and fervent musicality and was originally created on Wendy Whelan. The second work, Bloom, is an eagerly anticipated duet between Tiler Peck and Herman Cornejo choreographed by Justin Peck. Winding up the festival, tap wonder Ayodele Casel creates a new work commissioned for the festival, and which will no doubt elicit a buzz and set viewers' hearts aflow.

In contrast to whatever descriptors apply to the last nearly two years—challenging, difficult, unprecedented—a return to live dance at one of the world's choreographic crucibles is a long-overdue pivot back to the life-affirming cultural riches of the Big Apple, and a reminder of why people flock here. It's autumn in New York—and time to fall for dance all over again.

AN INVITATION FROM TWYLA THARP

When Deuce Coupe premiered at New York City Center in 1973, Twyla Tharp's radical collaboration with The Joffrey Ballet electrified audiences and stretched the boundaries of modern dance. Half a century later, City Center celebrates the iconic artist with TWYLA NOW—an ambitious program featuring dancers chosen by Tharp from three of New York's major dance companies—Alvin Ailey American Dance Theater, American Ballet Theatre, and New York City Ballet.

This evening, called TWYLA NOW, is composed of three duets referenced from the archive and a new piece. Cornbread was made as a pièce d'occasion in 2014. Second Duet was performed in a workshop by Kevin O'Day and myself, and the third, Pergolesi, is a duet first performed in Cutting Up—a 1992 tour featuring Mikhail Baryshnikov and myself. These three duets become the back story for All In, the second part of the evening, set to Brahms Opus 120.

This program was created over the course of six months, as these wonderful dancers were available in periods away from their home companies. The evening is danced by Aran Bell, Robbie Fairchild, James Gilmore, Jacqueline Harris, Catherine Hurlin, Sara Mearns, Roman Mejia, and Tiler Peck, and six young dancers—gathered from across the country and appearing through the good graces and support of their parents, teachers, and mentors.

TWYLA NOW is about time. It acknowledges a long history at City Center. Following Deuce Coupe, The Joffrey Ballet debuted As Time Goes By in the fall of the same year. Happily Ever After, a suite of dances to country music, came, again with the Joffrey, in 1976. Sextet and Octet, to a score by Edgar Myers, premiered in a 1991 season. Sweet Fields, Highway 66, and Heroes by David Bowie and Phil Glass were in a 1996 season. Known By Heart, with American Ballet Theatre and music by Terry Riley, was in 1998. Many other repertory works have also appeared in City Center seasons over the years including In the Upper Room, Nine Sinatra Songs, and The Golden Section.

What kept us all going through this devastatingly difficult period of a second year of the Covid-19 pandemic is the good will of City Center and its determination to sustain a career begun so long ago on its premises. This, in concert with a group of dancers whose spirit, talent, and faith, made it possible for me to want to come, day in and day out, to the beautiful fifth floor studio where so much of my history, as well as that of many I loved—George Balanchine, Jerome Robbins, Martha Graham, Merce Cunningham, Paul Taylor—evolved.

We invite you to be a part of TWYLA NOW and to share in the enduring community of dance.
